ALONG THE HIGH STRAND

Landscape paintings

Neither land or sea, this margin is often a forgotten place of tangled weeds, flowers and beach plants massing on the shore. Where nature thrives unencumbered and untended. Butterflies, bees, flies and moths are all abundant in this mankind-free zone.

There's a nostalgia and a fragile-ness to the subjects of the paintings shown here. Reminding us of a time when nature was doing better than it is today. So, these paintings are not landscapes in the traditional sense, but of landscape.

It is a luxury to have the time and the space to paint again and so a huge thanks go out to my family, and especially James, for giving me this privilege. This also gives me the opportunity to highlight what's important to me and having moved to the Suffolk coast I wanted to share with you some of its beauty.

Each painting is made from a few different images collated together. I like flattening the image, so that it becomes somewhat two dimensional allowing the patterns and the lines to take on a life of their own on the surface of the canvas, reaching out to the edges of their confining space. Like tangled plants themselves reaching out to the sky.

I like paint to look like paint, to be there for the sheer pleasure of it, with the brush marks and the swirls. I hope to create a sense of place, sometimes with a horizon, but not with any sense of time.

I hope you enjoy these paintings and that they inspire you to come to Suffolk, if you don't already live there, or to go to the beach!
